FIVE THINGS TO WATCH FOR AS PATRIOTS FACE TITANS

MATT BURKE, SPORTS EDITOR

The Patriots are just three wins away from winning their sixth Super Bowl title. Amazing. The first game in this month-long playoff journey comes Saturday against the Titans (8:15 p.m., CBS). Here are five things to watch for against Tennessee on Saturday night, and check out more Patriots coverage on Pages 4 and 19-23, as well as at metro.us.

WILL WE SEE EVEN MORE DOMINANCE OUT OF DION?

1 Dion Lewis came up huge in this round of the playoffs last year as he had a 98-yard kickoff return for a TD, a 13-yard TD reception, and a 1-yard TD run in the Pats' 34-16 win over Houston. Early in this season, the Pats were going with a running back by committee approach but Lewis has shown he can carry the load as the Pats' featured back. Since the weekend after Thanksgiving, Lewis has averaged 85.0 rushing yards per game and has three rushing touchdowns. He's also been exceptional in the passing game, as he had six catches for 40 yards and a TD in the Pats' regular-season finale win over the Jets. James White is expected to be back from injury Saturday night too, so it could be a big night for Patriots backs catching balls out of the backfield.

A LITTLE BIT OF HELP

2 The Titans would be wise to double and triple-team Rob Gronkowski Saturday. As the Steelers found out last month, Gronk in single coverage in a big game turns into a nightmare in a hurry. So, who will step up in the passing game for the Pats? Malcolm Mitchell is unlikely to suit up for the Pats for the playoffs, so one of the receivers in the second or third tier of the Pats depth chart is going to have to come up big. Will it be Chris Hogan, Danny Amendola, Kenny Britt or Phillip Dorsett?

GETTY IMAGES

JANUARY TOUGH

3 The Patriots absolutely own the Divisional Round of the NFL playoffs in the Belichick-Brady era. The Pats are an incredible 11-2 in this round since the 2001 season, with the only two losses coming at Denver in 2005 and at home against the Jets in 2010. This game against the Titans feels a lot like the 2011 playoffs when the Pats hosted the Tim Tebow-led Broncos in the divisional round. That Broncos team upset Pittsburgh the week prior and had already maxed out. The Titans' win over the Chiefs in Kansas City was their max-out moment.

DON'T GET IT TWISTED, MARIOTA IS MEDIOCRE

4 Titans quarterback Marcus Mariota had the highlight of wild-card weekend, throwing a touchdown pass to himself (Mariota's pass was deflected by old friend Darrelle Revis and back into his own hands), and leading his team to the biggest upset of the NFL playoffs so far. But Mariota was far from great in the win over Kansas City, getting picked off and finishing the contest with just 205 yards in the air and a so-so 88.8 passer rating. Many were quick to say that the win will propel Mariota into the upper-echelon of QBs in the NFL. That's a bit much, as Mariota finished the 2017 regular season as the 27th-best QB in the league (passer rating), having been beat out by players like Jay Cutler, Jacoby Brissett and Tyrod Taylor.

PATS NEED TO AVOID GETTING RUN OVER

5 In the Pats' two worst outings of the season (the 42-27 loss to KC on opening night and the 27-20 Monday night loss in Miami last month), they were shredded by an opposing running back. Kareem Hunt had 148 yards rushing and 98 yards receiving in Week 1 against the Pats and Miami's Kenyan Drake had 114 yards rushing and 79 yards receiving on Dec. 11. Tennessee's Derrick Henry is not as much of a dual threat as Hunt or Drake, but he was the best player on the field in the Titan's win at Kansas City last week, rushing for 156 yards and a touchdown. The Pats were 20th in the NFL this season in rush defense and will have to tighten things up Saturday night if they want to advance to their seventh straight AFC title game.

NO. 12 FOR NO. 12?

Patriots quarterback Tom Brady is now just one win away from playing in his 12th AFC Championship game. NFL greats Peyton Manning and John Elway combined to play in "only" 11 AFC title games in their careers.

The chef behind Tom Brady's diet wants you to eat more plants

Allen Campbell opens up about working with the Patriots star and more.

MATT JUUL

Eating healthy just got a lot easier thanks to the mastermind behind Tom Brady's diet plan.

After working with the Patriots superstar and his wife, Gisele Bundchen, chef Allen Campbell hopes to help Bostonians reach their "peak performance" with his new food service, Avail. Geared toward corporate wellness programs and health-conscious locals, the recently launched venture offers delicious meals that use organic and sustainable ingredients.

We caught up with the Chelmsford native to chat about the launch of Avail, what it was like to work with Brady on the "TB12 Nutrition Manual" and more.

What was your thought process behind creating Avail?

Avail is a project that I've been honing in on for a while. I come from a very traditional background, high-end food. From 2009-2010, I started to morph into this sort of healthy, all about wellness lifestyle. My philosophy has completely changed from what it was to what it is now. So here I find myself back in Boston working for top athletes and top models and all this, and I now have this passion to provide the same food that I used to provide for clients to the masses. For me, the best way to do that is Avail. Avail becomes the way to really reach the people of Boston and provide them options that they otherwise might not have here.

What can people expect from Avail's menu?

My philosophy is really grounded in a plant base foundation. I really believe that we need to eat more plants. Not only are plants better for overall human health, but eating more plants is also better for the planet. I think it's no coincidence that if we eat more plants, human health will improve and so will our habitat.

In the warmer months, the spring and the summer, there will be a lot more raw food and salads and creative dishes that maybe people haven't seen here on the east coast. The cold months, there'll be more soups and there'll be some meat or hardy root vegetables. The menus will change according to the season. It's like another level of local-seasonal.

You did an interview last year where you talked about your meal plans for Tom Brady and Gisele Bundchen. Did seeing that story go viral surprise you?

Very much so. I was not ready, not one bit, for that. That was the first time I had ever talked to the media in that way. At the time, I was working on the book I wrote with him and I was head down, in the zone. I just had a quick conversation with a reporter and the next thing you know. I took the picture in a t-shirt. I wasn't ready for, like you could tell if you read through the lines, I wasn't there for that. It was very nonchalant, "Yeah take a picture, do an interview." All of a sudden I'm being bombarded with international attention. So no I wasn't, I wasn't ready at all. I had no idea, to be honest. Maybe I should have, because they are big celebrities, but I wasn't ready for that at all.

> "I think it's no coincidence that if we eat more plants, human health will improve and so will our habitat"

Did you enjoy working with Brady on the nutrition manual?

I enjoyed it tremendously. That turned into a memoir of my time with him. Every recipe in there was specific to what he liked as a person. I didn't have to do that, but I chose to kind of personalize it to him as an individual and try to do it in a way that would obviously still look like a cookbook and be available to the masses. So it is very personal to me. I obviously made it in his house. Every recipe that's in the book, I tested in his house. Every picture, I took in the house. It was just an amazing experience. I'm so glad that people get to enjoy those recipes. They're really special to me.

Besides Avail, do you have any other fun projects for 2018?

In early 2018, my next book will launch. My next book is called "The Game of Eating Smart." It's a collaboration with Julie Loria, who owns the Miami Marlins, and 20 different players from all different teams, some of the top players in Major League Baseball—Jose Altuve, Carlos Correa, some of the biggest names and MVPs in the MLB. That will be a commercially published book that hits every major city. That's really, really exciting and I'm hoping to do a pop-up in Chelsea Market during the time of the launch and really just bring people in. The focus of that book is to shed a light on healthy eating in the baseball world.

5 Things to do in Boston for MLK Day

MLK Day falls on Jan. 15 this year. GETTY IMAGES

Between his work championing civil rights and advocating against the horrors of war, poverty and injustice, Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. has a firm place in American history. Boston has a special place in its heart for the late activist, as he once worked as an assistant minister at the city's historic Twelfth Baptist Church and also earned his Ph.D. in systematic theology at Boston University. From museums to memorial breakfasts, here's how the Hub is celebrating Dr. King's legacy this year.

MLK Memorial Breakfast

Billed as the nation's longest-running event dedicated to the memory of Dr. King, the annual MLK Memorial Breakfast returns Monday to "remember his words." From politicians to religious leaders, more than 1,000 people are expected to attend this year's breakfast, including CNN political analyst and activist Bakari Sellers, who will serve as the event's keynote speaker. WCVB's Chronicle co-anchor Shayna Seymour has also been tapped as this year emcee.
7:30 a.m., Convention And Exhibition Center, 415 Summer St., Boston, $50+, bostonmlkbreakfast.org

Boston Children's Chorus

Head to Symphony Hall for the Boston Children's Chorus' 15th annual tribute concert dedicated to Dr. King. Dubbed "Take My Hand," the show hopes to spread a message that one small act can help change things for the better. The concert will also be preceded by a cocktails and hors d'oeuvres reception.
7 p.m., Symphony Hall, 301 Massachusetts Ave., $15+, bostonchildrenschorus.org

Clap Your Hands

Join George Russell Jr. and company at the JFK Library for "Clap Your Hands," a morning of music that's meant to showcase how spirituals, gospel and folk-blues songs played integral roles in the Underground Railroad as well as the civil rights movement.
10:30 a.m., John F. Kennedy Presidential Library and Museum, Columbia Point, jfklibrary.org

Day of Service

The Isabella Stewart Gardner Museum will host a day of service Monday in honor of Dr. King. Head over to the museum for special exhibits and events, as well as to craft care packages for the Elizabeth Stone House, which helps families dealing with domestic violence. Admission to the museum will also be free that day.
11 a.m.-4 p.m., Isabella Stewart Gardner Museum, 25 Evans Way, free, gardnermuseum.org

Free museum admission

Boston's Museum of Fine Arts and the Institute for Contemporary Art will be offering free admission on MLK Day as well. In addition to the open house, the MFA will be hosting a number of special events that hope to channel the spirit of Dr. King.
10 a.m.-5 p.m., Institute for Contemporary Art, 25 Harbor Shore Dr., free, icaboston.org; 10 a.m.-5 p.m., Museum of Fine Arts, 465 Huntington Ave., Boston, free, mfa.org

Kathleen Madigan talks UFOs, conspiracies and Donald Trump

The veteran comic brings her "Boxed Wine and Bigfoot" tour to New England.

LUZENA ADAMS

Kathleen Madigan's "Boxed Wine and Bigfoot" tour sounds more like an episode of "Coast to Coast AM" than a comedy show.

While a lot of comics are focusing on politics these days thanks to the rise of Donald Trump, the veteran comedian and "Last Comic Standing" star would rather talk about aliens and UFOs on stage. It's not that Madigan doesn't have opinions about the president, she's just more interested in going down the rabbit hole of supernatural stories.

Ahead of her shows at Foxwoods and The Wilbur, we caught up with Madigan to talk about her new tour, her favorite internet conspiracies and why she wouldn't be shocked if Trump quits.

Are you excited for your weekend of shows in snowy New England?
I'm really excited because it's starting out gambling. We're starting out on the right foot at Foxwoods. That's a great way to start a New Year.

It sounds like you're taking a dive into some of the more fun conspiracies out there with your "Boxed Wine and Bigfoot" tour.
I am like the weird page of the internet where you're like, "Wait, what? We're missing a whole airplane with 230 people?" Like those kind of off-beat things. A couple weeks ago, it was right before Christmas, a UFO video came out with four Navy fighter pilots. I'm sorry, why isn't that the lead story? I don't understand why people don't put the same amount of value when there are four Navy guys who clearly are not like jackasses drunk in the woods reporting this. These are for real people. We're being visited by aliens but we're going to talk about Donald Trump's tweets today? No. I think the order's a little messed up.

After a year in office, does anything coming out of Trump's White House shock you anymore?
No, and it won't surprise me if he quits. He quit everything else that didn't work. When Atlantic City doesn't go his way, he leaves. That's what narcissists do, though, when it's not going their way. I can already picture the speech, "I tried, I gave it what I could, but they..." and then he's the victim. No, nothing would surprise me.

What's your favorite conspiracy that's floating around the internet?
I don't like the word conspiracy because that goes too far into the dark crap that I just think is too convoluted. These are things like the UFO stuff or what did happen to the missing Malaysia Airlines Flight 370. I mean yeah, people looked for it, but that, to me, is a much bigger problem, an actually reality. We can lose a plane in 2015 out of the sky and never find it. I think everybody's gotten on a plane thinking, "What if this plane goes down?" I don't think anybody's ever gotten on a plane thinking, "What if this plane goes missing forever?" What? No. That was acceptable in 1640 when they'd send a ship out from Spain and then somebody would go, "I don't know. They left on Thursday and we never heard anything. All right, I guess it sunk."

I'm guessing it's more fun to talk about Bigfoot or the Loch Ness Mosnter than politically-charged conspiracies like Pizzagate.
Conspiracy, to me, is too much like a "9/11 inside job." That's where you get super-left-field people that I think are too dark for my liking. Mine's a little lighter. I can't even think about all that stuff. Even if half of what they're saying would somehow be proven true, I really don't even want to know. Count me out. I'm not going down that road.

While the show won't be back for its final season until 2019, local fans can get their "Game of Thrones" fix at a new pop-up bar in Boston this winter.

Throughout the month of January, the Patio at Precinct Kitchen + Bar will be home to a set-up inspired by the hit HBO fantasy series. The Back Bay restaurant will transform its outdoor space into a pop-up experience fit for a Lannister, complete with house banners, thrones, rustic decor, plus wearable furs so guests can stay warm while channeling their inner Jon Snow.

In addition to turning the venue into a Westeros-style pub, Precinct will have a special menu on hand that should delight "Game of Thrones" fans.

Beginning this week, guests will be able order nine limited-edition drinks, which all feature names that would make George R.R. Martin proud. The Kingslayer ($14) features a combination of gin, lemon and sparkling wine while the Cerseis Poison ($14) is made with vodka, peach bitters, lime and ginger beer.

Several drink options will be served in specialty glassware or bottles as well, such as the Red Wedding ($14-$30), a hot mulled wine, or the Brewery Ommegang "Winter is Coming" beer ($24), a Belgian-style double white ale.

For fans of Daenarys Targaryan who want to get their Khaleesi on, we recommend ordering the Smoke of the Dragons Breath ($16), which is sure to be a crowd-pleaser. This mixture of rum, mezcal, sweet vermouth, simple syrup and bitters is served in a glass box that's pumped with smoke in order to give the drink an added layer of flavor.

Through Jan. 31,

On the food side of things, Precinct will have half a dozen bar bites available, including items like Chicken Littlefingers ($12) and Deviled Dragon Eggs ($8). The Direwolf Charcuterie Platter ($19) is particularly tasty, featuring Berkshire prosciutto, Napoli salumi, chorizo, coppa, whole-grain mustard, mostarda, cornichons and grilled bread.

The wild world of true-crime podcasts

Why people can't get enough of these real-life mystery stories. PAT KING

Phoebe Judge, the host and co-creator of the "Criminal" podcast, listens to Lauren Spohrer, her co-creator of the podcast, after she records an ad for the show in a studio at WUNC in Chapel Hill, North Carolina, on June 22, 2017. JLEONARD@NEWSOBSERVER.COM

True-crime podcasts have become just as binge-able as anything these days.

Fanatical fans wait for new episodes of shows to be uploaded each day in order to get a closer glimpse into the world's dark underbelly. This format has redefined how investigative journalism is consumed and, in turn, has increased its popularity over the years, as it gives everyday people the chance to choose how and when they can join in on the cases.

Award-winning journalist Phoebe Judge has been a trailblazer in the world of true-crime podcasting ever since she started her wildly popular show "Criminal" in 2014. Around that time, the landscape was pretty empty for shows like hers.

"When we got into true-crime podcasting there really weren't any other true-crime shows," Judge said. "We were trying to find a topic that interested us but also a topic where we knew there were really rich stories."

Unlike other true-crime podcasts that tend to take people through every gruesome detail of history's most shocking cases, Judge and her team at "Criminal" chose to take a different route. With each episode, Judge hears stories from everyday people about their own bizarre encounters with criminal activity. Episodes run the gamut from intriguing to bone-chilling.

"We always wanted to explore the boundaries of what this word 'crime' meant," said Judge. "It was exciting for us because we thought we could surprise people. We took the broadest definition of the word 'crime,' and that means some of the stories are funny! I think we have this idea that we need to pigeonhole true-crime into this one category. Often times, that category is dark, sad, tragic and often times violent. We wanted to do the exact opposite."

Making the move

from filmmaking to podcasting

Larry Brand had no expectations while he was writing his hit eight-part podcast series "Hollywood & Crime: Young Charlie" (on the Wondery network) about the early life of Charles Manson. But as both a screenwriter and director in Hollywood for over 30 years, if Brand knew one thing while making the jump into true-crime podcasting it was how to tell a story.

"When you don't know what you can't do, you just go do it. I didn't know how to make a podcast so I just did what I did and tried to make a movie for the ears," Brand said.

"Young Charlie" was a huge hit right out of the gate. Its success was in part to the cinematic scope that Brand brought to the show. The story avoids taking a direct linear path as Brand made the choice to bounce back and forth between different eras of Manson's life to paint a larger picture of the infamous criminal. "I am pleasantly surprised that podcasts like this show do as well as they do," Brand said. "It's something positive about the imagination that you

YOUNG CHARLIE

"When you don't know what you can't do, it can be a real asset. ... When you don't know what you can't do, you just go do it. I didn't know how to make a podcast so I just did what I did and tried to make a movie for the ears. I didn't try to learn how to make a podcast, I just used what I know from the other field. Sometimes that can have a synergistic quality and sometimes it can just be a disaster!"

-Larry Brand, on writing his hit eight-part podcast series "Hollywood & Crime: Young Charlie" can listen to something and evoke these images and let it carry you even though the next minute you could be going to see a big-budget blockbuster film."

Finding humor in horror with "The Last Podcast on the Left"

On the other end of the true-crime spectrum is the comedic yet intensely researched investigative podcast "Last Podcast on the Left." Hosted by comedians Henry Zebrowski, Ben Kissel and Marcus Parks, the show takes on some of history's most infamous serial killers and conspiracy theories and delves into the mysteries surrounding each story. In a completely hilarious way, of course.

It would be easy to not take this show as seriously as some of the other more grave podcasts in the genre, but the research that goes into each story can take weeks or months, depending on how in depth it goes. Some cases are given three to four episodes to tell fully, with Parks writing a 10- to 15-page script to keep the narrative straight along the way.

For Parks, it's all about finding the bizarre angle to a story that you would have never seen coming.

"Finding that really weird stuff almost happens on accident," said Parks, "it's great when those weird little accidents happen. ... Finding that odd twist to the whole thing that doesn't really make any sense but makes it fun. Those weird things that people believe about serial killers or conspiracy theories. It's all fun."

After the winter of 2015 affected MBTA service, Massachusetts voters say the transit system is handling snowy weather better. NICOLAUS CZARNECKI/METRO

New poll: Voters say MBTA is faring better in winter weather

Massachusetts voters on how well the T is handling the season, as well as on Gov. Baker's role with the transit authority and their approval of him. KRISTIN TOUSSAINT

50%
IN BOSTON AND ITS INNER SUBURBS, 50 PERCENT SAID THEY THINK THE MBTA IS DOING A BETTER JOB AT HANDLING WINTER WEATHER THAN IN PAST YEARS.

74%
WHEN ASKED ABOUT THE GOVERNOR'S ROLE APART FROM THE T, 74 PERCENT OF VOTERS SAID THEY APPROVED OF THE JOB THAT GOV. BAKER IS DOING.

The winter of 2015 will forever linger in Boston commuters' minds, sparking fear whenever new flakes fall that the T will simply shut down, unable to handle the weather.

In the years since, Gov. Charlie Baker and MBTA officials have focused on improving the transit system, promising in recent years that the T is prepared for winter.

But how do Massachusetts residents feel about the T's winter performance since 2015?

Forty-five percent say that the MBTA is doing a better job at handling the cold and snow this year, compared to winters past, according to a new poll out by the MassINC Polling Group and Sponsored by WBUR.

The poll surveyed 504 registered voters in Massachusetts, who answered questions via telephone between Friday, Jan. 5 through Sunday, Jan. 7 on topics from Baker's popularity, President Donald Trump's job performance, how well voters know the politicians challenging Baker and Sen. Elizabeth Warren, and, of course, Baker's role with the MBTA.

The poll was conducted in the wake of the Jan. 4 bomb cyclone that dropped more than a foot of snow on Boston, resulted in historic flooding and was accompanied by dangerously-low temperatures.

Still, after all of that, 45 percent of poll takers said the MBTA was handling the weather better than before and 30 percent said it was doing about the same as previous years.

Only 3 percent of respondents said the MBTA was doing a worse job and 22 percent said they didn't know or refused to answer — maybe, as the Boston Globe points out, because the poll was directed as residents statewide who may not be familiar with the transit system.

In Boston and its inner suburbs specifically, 50 percent said they think the MBTA is doing better at handling winter weather.

Concerning his role apart from the T, 74 percent of Massachusetts voters said that they approve of the job Baker is doing overall, with 66 percent saying they view him favorably.

Trump, a Republican like Baker, did not fare as well. Only 28 percent of voters said they viewed him favorably and 29 percent said they approve of how he's doing as president. Fifty-nine percent of Massachusetts voters also think that Trump has been bad for the country, with 40 percent saying that he's been bad for Massachusetts specifically.

As for Massachusetts's future, 73 percent of respondents said that they still think the state is headed in the right direction overall, with 19 percent believing that the commonwealth is headed down the wrong track.

Some female lawmakers to wear black in protest at Trump's State of the Union

The House Democrats will show solidarity with victims of sexual harassment and misconduct. MICHAEL MARTIN

Some female Democratic members of Congress, including House Speaker Nancy Pelosi, plan to wear black to President Trump's State of the Union address on Jan. 30 to protest sexual harassment.

The protest, which echoes the wardrobe blackout at last Sunday's Golden Globes, is led by Rep. Jackie Speier (D-CA), who has taken a leading role in speaking out against sexual misconduct on Capitol Hill and started the #MeTooCongress hashtag. "This is a culture change that is sweeping the country and Congress is embracing it," she said in a statement.

On Twitter, Speier called for men and women of both political parties to participate. "My colleagues and I in the @HouseDemWomen are calling on our fellow MoCs - women & men, Democrats & Republicans - to wear black to this year's #SOTU in solidarity w/survivors of sexual harassment/violence in Hollywood, politics, the military, academia, etc. #TIMESUP #MeToo," she wrote on Wednesday.

Speier tagged the post #TIMESUP, to recognize the legal defense fund for victims of sexual harassment and workplace equality. It is supported by a group of 300 prominent women working in Hollywood, including Reese Witherspoon, America Ferrera and Shonda Rhimes.

"We are supporting the brave women in every industry and every corner of the country who are making their voices heard," said Pelosi in a statement. "We are at a watershed moment in the nationwide fight against sexual harassment and discrimination, and we must continue to keep up the drumbeat of action for real change."

Pelosi and Speier are members of the House Democratic Working Group, which is chaired by Rep. Lois Frankel (D-Fla). Members of the group wore white to Trump's first address to a joint session of Congress last February to commemorate female suffrage and rebuke Trump's treatment of women.

In recent months, male politicians on both sides of the aisle have been forced to resign or have said they will not run for re-election amid charges of sexual misconduct, including Al Franken, John Conyers, Blake Farenthold and Ruben Kiuhen.

President Trump has been accused of sexual harassment and misconduct by more than a dozen women, with some charges dating back decades. A lawsuit filed by a former Apprentice contestant is being considered by the New York State Supreme Court. Trump has said that the accusations are "100% fabricated and made-up charges."

Last year, Speier revealed that she had been sexually harassed early in her career as a Capitol Hill staffer, when a senior aide "held my face, kissed me, and stuck his tongue in my mouth." She has led the push for a crackdown on sexual harassment in Congress going forward. "We say we have zero tolerance for that, but what does zero tolerance mean," she told Time last November. "They're meaningless words if you're not willing to say, 'We're not going to allow this to go on here.' "

"We are supporting the brave women in every industry and every corner of the country who are making their voices heard," House Minority Leader Nancy Pelosi said in a statement. GETTY IMAGES

The Key to a warm-weather escape

The undisputed best view of the island, from the rooftop bar at La Concha Key West PROVIDED

It's time for a weekend away from this Arctic blast, already.

JOSHUA CROUTHAMEL
features@metro.us

Somewhere between Key Largo and Montego there's a place called Kokomo … but Key West is where you actually want to go if you'd like to sample some surf and sand, as well as interesting activities, locals-mostly hot spots and romantic — and/or family — fun in the Florida sun.

What's the hype about?

Closer to Havana (Cuba) than Hollywood (Florida), Key West has been serving up unpretentious island appeal to foodies, families, writers and romantics for hundreds of years. As such it is both an idyllic beach break for those looking to decompress and an historical and cultural hot spot for those who prefer more of a "to do" list on vacation.

The southernmost bit of the Sunshine State is only 4 miles long and 1 mile wide, so it's easy to wrap your head around — and no doubt will feel like home after a few days. At just 90 miles from Havana you have the benefits of the Afro-Caribbean influences to both food and history, and the ease of leaving your expired passport in your underwear drawer for the journey.

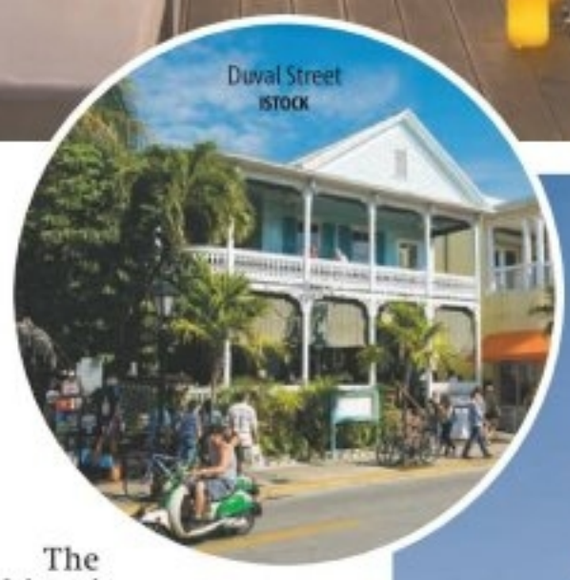
Top activities? The Gulf, golf, gastronomy and gratuitous indulgence. Let's look a bit closer at each:

With azure waters and sandy beaches, Key West attracts divers and snorkelers as well as anglers. Locals love to take a boat to an unpopulated sandbar for a private piece of playa, but public beaches (like Smathers — the largest on the island) abound if you prefer company.

Key West may be tiny, but has managed to squeeze 18 Caribbean-style holes onto not much space if you're looking to hit a few balls during your beach break.

The food and bar scene is built for anyone hungry for a vacay. Key West natives flock to El Siboney on Catherine Street for authentic Cuban cuisine (go for the grouper but save room for the plantains, beans and toast — not to mention the sangria!). And if you'd like to blend in while bar hopping, order a Papas Pilar Blonde Rum, neat, wherever you end up, and prepare to be asked by tourists how long you've lived in the Keys, and for your personal recommendations.

Oh, and let's not forget to mention Duval Street, which is the main drag and certain to play a big part in your vacay. Be it people watching, drink downing or gift shopping, Duval's the place to see and be sea-n.



Duval Street ISTOCK

Where am I staying?

You'll never be far from the action, regardless of where you unpack your flip flops on Key West, but why not quit the car keys and stay a short stroll from everything in a boutique hotel that takes pride of place right on the aforementioned Duval Street?

Welcome to La Concha Key West.

If La Concha Key West was good enough for Ernest Hemmingway and Tennessee Williams, we're sure it's good enough for you.

The historic property has a charming sense of 1920s nostalgia and all the 2018 mod-cons that make vacations memorable. Pop by the rooftop spa for the best vantage on island views, and call into the onsite wine bar or pool for a vintage drop or cocktail.

How soon can I get there?

There are direct flights from Newark to Key West, but you can also fly from just about anywhere to Miami or Fort Lauderdale, from which it's a few hours of driving (3.5 from South Beach and 4 from Las Olas). So when you see a flash sale to any of these airports, grab a ticket at a bargain while you can, and you'll be on island time before the rest of us have managed to dig out from the snow.

Get there fast and then take it slow ISTOCK

How the recent cold snap affected New England ski resorts

Thankfully it'll be much warmer this weekend. ERIC WILBUR

Considering its location in the face of Mount Washington, where temperatures dipped to minus-36 degrees at the summit (tying it for the second-coldest place on Earth on Saturday), it was little surprise to notice last Friday that Wildcat Mountain had made an immediate decision to shut down operations for the following day.

With extremely cold temperatures and high winds expected to result in wind chill values well below minus-50, the safety of employees and guests became the priority in Pinkham Notch, New Hampshire, a retreating approach that repeated elsewhere in New England on an historically frigid weekend.

It was just past 9 a.m., for instance, when Vermont's Killington Mountain Resort, the self-proclaimed Beast of the East with the longest running schedule in the region, announced that the high winds and cold temperatures were too much for the mountain to consider running lifts, instead sending skiers and riders to nearby, sister ski area Pico down the road.

"The decision was made for the safety of our guests and staff," Killington spokesperson Kristel Fillmore said. "The winds were less beastly at Pico Mountain so lower mountain lifts were operating on Saturday."

In northern Vermont, Jay Peak Resort followed suit with wind speeds approaching 40 miles per hour and temperatures hovering only just above minus-25 degrees. Other resorts managed to stay open, but found themselves forced to close lifts on the upper regions of the mountains, those being more prone to the high winds that tortured those limited brave souls who still insisted on a day at the slopes.

Those in lower elevations made the best of what the cold delivered.

"All in all, yes, the week could've been better without the cold temperatures, but conditions across the resort for all activities and mostly sunny skies with little-to-no-wind at King Pine made for a decent week," said Thomas Prindle, spokesperson for King Pine Ski Area, in Madison, New Hampshire. "We generally benefit from being a bit further south at lower elevations and protected from winds."

The cold snap certainly affected visits, with most ski areas reporting lesser-than-expected crowds over the recent holiday vacation week, which means that the upcoming MLK weekend arrives as a pivotal marker for the industry. But the temperatures have also allowed to maintain the snow coverage opening the doors to a big rebound only one week later.

"These consistently chilly temperatures are keeping the snow surface in great shape and the natural snow we had, combined with favorable snowmaking conditions, have allowed us to open 99 percent of our terrain," Okemo Mountain Resort spokesperson Bonnie McPherson said last week.

Same snow. Less danger. Sounds like a much better mix this time around.

New Arthritis Painkiller Works on Contact and Numbs the Pain in Minutes

New cream works faster and is more targeted than oral medications. Key ingredients penetrate the skin within minutes to relieve joint arthritis pain. Users report significant immediate relief.

By Robert Ward
Associated Health Press

BOSTON – Innovus Pharmaceuticals has introduced a new arthritis pain relief treatment that works in minutes.

When applied to an arthritic joint, or a painful area on the body, it delivers immediate relief that lasts for hours and hours.

The powerful painkilling effect is created by the creams active ingredient, a special medical compound.

Anesthetics are used in hospitals during surgery. They block nerve signals from the brain so that patients don't feel pain and they work fast.

The anesthetic found in Apeaz™ is the strongest available without a prescription.

The cream form allows users to directly target their area of pain. It works where it is applied. The company says this is why the product is so effective and fast acting.

"Users can expect to feel relief immediately after applying," explains Dr. Bassam Damaj, President of Innovus Pharmaceuticals.

"There will a pleasant warming sensation that is followed by a cool, soothing one. This is how you know that the active ingredients have reached the infected joint and tissue."

Works In Minutes

For arthritis suffers, Apeaz offers impressive advantages over traditional medications. The most obvious is how quickly it relieves discomfort.

The cream contains the maximum approved dose of a top anesthetic, which penetrates the skin in a matter of minutes to numb the area that's in pain. This relief lasts for several hours.

Additional ingredients in the cream help suppress inflammation around tissues and joints. Published pre-clinical studies have shown that the ingredients in Apeaz™ can also prevent further bone and cartilage destruction.

There are also no negative side effects from the oral medication. Apeaz™ delivers its ingredients through the skin. Oral medications are absorbed in the digestive tract. Overtime, the chemicals in pills can tear the delicate lining of the stomach, causing ulcers and bleeding.

When compared to other arthritis medications, Apeaz™ is a fraction of the cost. At less than $2 a day, the cream quickly is becoming a household name.

Those with terrible arthritis in their hands and fingers, love how easy Apeaz™ is to open. The jar fits in the palm of the hand, which makes it much easier to use.

Instant Pain Relief Without a Prescription

Many Apeaz™ users report significant improvements in daily aches and pain. Many more report increased flexibility and less stiffness. They are moving pain free for the first time in years, like Henry Esber, and early user of Apeaz™.

"I've tried more pills than I can count. I've also had a handful of cortisone shots. Nothing is as effective as this product. With Apeaz™, I get relief right away. I rub a little on my knees and some through my hands. It keeps the pain away. It also prevents the pain from getting really bad. It's completely changed my life."

How It Works

"Apeaz™ contains the highest, non-prescription dose of a medical compound that fights pain on contact. When applied to the skin it goes to work within minutes by penetrating right to the source of your pain, numbing the nerve endings."

Apeaz™: Quick Acting Pain and Arthritis Cream is Now Available Without a Prescription

"This is why Apeaz™ is so effective for people with arthritis. It reduces pain while adding an additional layer of joint protection," explains Damaj.

A New Way to Treat Pain

Although Dr. Damaj and his team say that their cream is the fastest and most effective way to relieve arthritis pain, they believe there is still a reason to take joint pills. The most effective are those which help to further strengthen and support the joints.

That's why every container of Apeaz™ comes with ArthriVarx™, a breakthrough pill that's taking on joint support in an entirely new way.

ArthriVarx™ works on your joints, making it the perfect companion to Apeaz™.

Trade Bill Belichick for draft picks? No thanks. GETTY IMAGES

What planet am I on?

Certainly not the one where having the No. 1 seed in the playoffs and being the favorite to win the Super Bowl is an admirable position. Absolutely not the one where you can take pleasure in watching the greatest coach and quarterback of all-time continue to be at the top of their game.

What if I told you, in 2018, as the Patriots begin their quest for a sixth championship, people in New England would be talking about trading Bill Belichick for draft picks?

Or, even better, what if I told you these same people would be ready to move on from Tom Brady during a season in which he'll most likely be crowned regular-season MVP for the third time in his career?

Sounds like a disturbing "30-for-30" promo that details the moment everybody lost their [expletive] minds.

"Oh, Danny, don't spill any of that the Kool-Aid on your Patriots jersey while typing," some are probably saying.

I can hear them now. Because that's what it's come to. I actually have to defend myself against people who have brainwashed themselves into thinking it's now a sign of weakness and "homerism" to find enjoyment in my hometown football team being the best in the league, still.

Look, if the Patriots lose to the Tennessee Titans on Saturday night, then they deserve to be criticized and crushed by fans and media. But, if what I've been watching over the last 16 games isn't a figment of my imagination, then I don't see how they could possibly lose this Divisional Round game at home.

I expect the Patriots to advance to their seventh straight AFC Championship. Others, like ESPN's Seth Wickersham, expect Belichick to pack his bags and leave town, regardless of what happens the rest of the playoffs.

By now, you've read Wickersham's highly-exaggerated version of what's going on behind the scenes in Foxborough. You shouldn't need me to tell you that Belichick and Brady remain focused on their short-term goal of winning another Super Bowl together. But here we are.

And I mean, how

Jimmy Garoppolo has a long way to go before he reaches Tom Brady status. GETTY IMAGES much longer are people going to complain about the Jimmy Garoppolo trade? Whatever the reason you disagree with it, at what point do you eventually come back down to Earth and realize that Brady is still one of the best quarterbacks in the NFL?

What, I'm crazy to keep pointing that out? Why? It's not an opinion. It's a fact. Any praise for the Patriots over the last two decades is basically just a reminder of the facts. That's all it is.

Some people don't like facts. They don't like the fact that Brady and Garoppolo have the same agent. They don't like the fact that Garoppolo wasn't going to sign that contract extension to stay in New England. They don't like the fact that giving your backup quarterback $25 million under the franchise tag when he still won't sign that same contract extension next October is the equivalent of taking $25 million and throwing it in a garbage barrel. And they don't like the fact that Belichick only got a second-round pick for Garoppolo.

But more than anything else, they absolutely hate the fact that, through it all, Brady is still the cream of the crop at 40 years old.

The response?

"They're not on the same page. Something's going on behind the scenes. Belichick and Brady can't stand each other. Belichick wants out. You know what, the Patriots should trade Belichick if he doesn't want to be here. They should've just kept Garoppolo and traded Brady, and all this dysfunction could've been avoided."

It's making my head spin.

Even if the Patriots don't win this year's Super Bowl in Minnesota, do you know who's already the favorite to win next year's Super Bowl in Atlanta?

That's right, it's the Patriots.

And unfortunately, we're currently living in a world where I have to explain why.
